If you are using Windows and other Win-Apps, it is no problem to drag and drop your Track to the Vst-Fx version, then drag the Vst-Instrument version on top of the Vst-Fx and drop again. All reviews Rob Great sequencer, looks really good. But after a while of using it, I'm finding it difficult to use. The hit and hold knob really doesn't seem to work as a step sequencer. If you think of say a 1/4 note. It stops with each beat of the third, the piano part. Is the sequencer a basic beginner type one, or a more advanced advanced one. I'm not asking for a tutorial on how to use it, but the library (which is very limited) is there for anyone who wants to learn it. I think a VST Instrument version of this would be very useful. I'm sure it is something I would have to sell off for another piece of software. I really like the sequencer and can do some good things with it. Sorry for writing a bit much. Regards Bert Loaded this sequencer a few days ago with this order. 1. Sequencer - Slifty 2. Sampler - Digi Moog FH5 3. Keys - Xpand 4. Drumkit - Akai MPK 70 5. Bass - Digi Reaxx 2 6. Instrument Track - TC Buchla D2 I keep hearing guys who say that it's one of the coolest synths. I'll be keeping this loaded for the foreseeable future. Slifty lets you play back your samples in step-sequenced fashion, just insert the samples in the sample-slots. The samples can be half-, quarter-, eighth-, etc. note longs. Playback in Slitely follows the samples' duration. You can choose between four sample-paths by sliding a cross-fader. You also have some sliders to control the playback speed of the six engines. The engines are semi-synth engines. There's a synth engine for each sample-slot. You may want to change the output-sample-rate with a press on the 'Master slider', which will then be applied to all engines. Please read the description of the engines for more information. The cross-fader activates another set of engines, which can be used to play back your current or next sample. If you activate the cross-fader, all samples are played back, until a sample-slot is consumed or the sync-counter reaches the end. The 'Master slider' applies the selected output-sample-rate to the main mixer. In addition to the engines and sample-slots, you may use the equalizer sliders and the insert/send button to control the sound of the plugin. Notice that the send button is not usable while the plugin is active. When you press the 'Next' button on the sequencer, a new sample is started. The 'Master slider' controls the amount of 'db' the main mixer adds to the next sample. Press the 'Zoom in' button to zoom the mixer slider. Or press the 'Zoom out' button to zoom the slider out. The zoom-sliders affect the new-sample-amount but not the 'db'-amount. The 'Master slider' affects both the 'db'-amount and the new-sample-amount. You can use the 'Zoom' buttons to zoom-in or zoom-out the 'Master slider' instead of the zoom-sliders. The 'All audio' button turns on/off the panning of the audio. The 'Aux 1' and 'Aux 2' buttons control the panning of audio coming from the corresponding engine. The 'Aux 1' button turns the aux audio on, the 'Aux 2' button turns the aux audio off. You can use the 'Aux In'
